Key Highlights

- Spot market treasury bills were oversubscribed, recording a subscription rate of 135.7% from 220.2% recorded the previous week. Absolute demand remained skewed towards the 364-day paper – which received bids amounting to KES 22.83 Bn against KES 10.00Bn offered, underscoring continued preference for longer-tenor instruments amid relatively attractive yields. The 91-day paper also recorded strong uptake, receiving KES 7.51Bn against the KES 4.00Bn on offer, signaling sustained short-term liquidity positioning. In contrast, the 182-day paper continued to underperform, attracting only KES 2.24Bn against KES 10.00Bn offered, indicating persistent investor reluctance toward the mid-tenor as market participants favored either liquidity or higher yield.
- The government is looking to raise KES 60.00Bn through the re-opening of the FXD1/2019/020 and FXD1/2022/025 bonds, which are earmarked for budgetary support in FY25/26. The bonds have a quoted tenor to maturity of 13.2 yrs and 21.8 yrs, while the coupon rates are set at 12.8730% and 14.1880% respectively. Bidding is set to close on 7th January 2026. We will be issuing further bidding guidance. Additionally, the National Treasury announced a switch auction from FXD1/2016/010 (0.6 years to maturity, coupon 15.039%) to the re-opened FXD1/2022/015 (11.3 years to maturity, coupon 13.942%), as part of its strategy to smooth the debt maturity profile and manage refinancing risk.
- The 91-day Treasury Bill rate witnessed a 0.04bps w/w downtick to 7.78%. Meanwhile, the accepted average yields on the 182-day paper declined by 0.43 bps to 7.80%, whilst the 364-day paper declined by 13.29 bps. Looking ahead, we expect yields to continue trending downwards in the near term, however, now at a slower pace.
- Across the secondary bond market, the value of bonds traded decreased 9.4% w/w to KES 54.84 Bn from KES 60.53 Bn recorded a week prior. The NSE Bond Index witnessed a decrease of 71.95 bps w/w to 1167.30 points, driven largely by an increase in the 21-year benchmark yields. The 21-year yield rose the most by 54.82 bps w/w while the 6-year yield eased the most by 104.43 bps w/w.
- Yields on Kenya's Eurobond papers increased by an average of 10.12 bps w/w.

Macroeconomic Developments

Exchange Rate

- The Kenya Shilling appreciated against the USD, closing the week at KES 129.16 from 129.31 the previous week, posting a marginal w/w appreciation of 0.1%. The Shilling's YTD appreciation against the USD stood at 0.1%.
- Official forex reserves increased by 0.3% w/w to USD 12,065 Mn from USD 12,030 Mn. The current reserves now offer about 5.24 months of import cover, meeting the CBK's statutory requirement of 4 months. The reserves also met the EAC's convergence requirement of 4.5 months of import cover.

Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) policy decision

- The Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) lowered the Central Bank Rate (CBR) by 25 bps to 9.00% from 9.25% during its December 2025 meeting, in line with our expectations. The MPC noted continued resilience in economic activity, with growth supported by services, agriculture, and a recovering industrial sector, while global risks persist amid trade policy uncertainties and geopolitical tensions. Overall, the policy easing signals confidence in the inflation trajectory and aims to support economic momentum while maintaining macroeconomic stability.

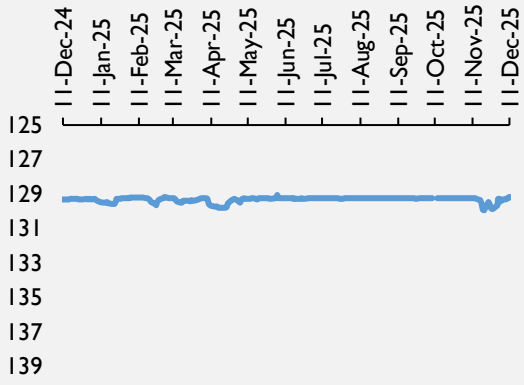

EPRA Pump Price Review- December 2025

- The Energy and Petroleum Regulatory Authority (EPRA) has released the maximum retail pump prices for the December-January cycle, maintaining price stability for the fourth consecutive month. Super Petrol, Diesel, and Kerosene prices will remain unchanged, with motorists in Nairobi continuing to pay KES 184.52 per litre for Super Petrol, KES 171.47 per litre for Diesel, and KES 154.78 per litre for Kerosene.
- EPRA noted that the average landed cost of Super Petrol declined slightly by 4.3% to USD 619.14 per cubic metre in November 2025. In contrast, the landed cost of Diesel and Kerosene rose by 3.02% and 5.52% to USD 654.24 and USD 667.05 per cubic metre, respectively. Albeit the upward pressure from higher Diesel and Kerosene import costs, domestic retail prices were kept steady, supported by a relatively stable exchange rate and the prevailing tax structure.
- Going forward, in the near term, we expect fuel prices to remain stable, supported by a stable currency. The sustained stability in pump prices is likely to help contain cost-push inflation pressures and support inflation remaining within the CBK's target range. However, potential shocks from global supply disruptions and heightened geopolitical risks remain key uncertainties going forward.

Liquidity

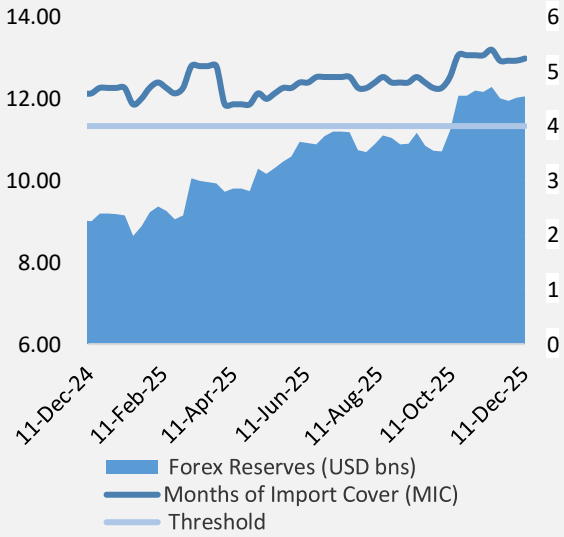

- Liquidity conditions across the money market eased as evidenced by the 4.83 bps decrease in the average interbank rate to 9.2%. Going forward, we expect KESONIA to track the CBR rate closely.

AIB-AXYS Weekly Global Markets Note

15th December 2025

• Global Markets Commentary

❖ As expected, the Federal Open Market Committee delivered a 25 bps cut, bringing the benchmark to between 3.50% - 3.75%, boosting equities, with major indices climbing on Wednesday while yields eased. There were three dissents, of which two preferred holding rates steady, pointing to caution on inflation. Going forward, the committee will be guided by economic data when making rate decisions. So far, signs are showing weakness in the labor market, and the Fed is trying to balance inflation levels while also supporting the labor market, approaching a neutral rate. Additionally, another key takeaway from last week's meeting was that the committee noted embarking on short-term Treasury securities in a bid to maintain adequate supply. Despite the easing by the Fed, it was not enough to cool selloffs that left tech equities, especially in the US, on weekly declines. Investor scrutiny on AI names continued. Recent reports revealed that Oracle is pushing back the completion date of its data centers due to material and labor challenges. It also emerged that Broadcom will hold off on providing its AI annual revenue forecast. During an earnings call, management noted that the company currently has a backlog of USD 73.0 Bn in AI products slated to be shipped over the upcoming six quarters. These developments caused the share price to recoil, marking one of its largest single-day losses, as investors assessed whether the chip maker would actually reap from its AI investments. AI has remained on investors' radar in recent months, and we expect questions around valuations and justifications for heavy spending to persist.

❖ Global equities closed on a mixed note at a median return of 0.2%, a slowdown from the 3.2% weekly gains recorded in the previous week. Losses in tech names dragged overall performance, especially on Friday. In the US, despite the Fed cutting rates, AI concerns erased earlier gains, with both the Nasdaq and S&P 500 closing the week on declines. During the week, Broadcom, a key industry leader in chip manufacturing, delivered upbeat results. However, it failed to provide a clear picture of its sales outlook, investors anticipate possibilities of squeezed profit margins. To some extent, investors did not find this encouraging, which triggered some sell offs. Meanwhile, President Trump is expected to appoint the next Fed Chair as Jerome Powell's term draws to a close. The next Fed Chair is largely expected to be a dove in order to augment President Trump's agenda for an accommodative policy environment.

❖ Across Europe, Germany's DAX gained 0.7% on a weekly basis as the market digested the Fed's decision to cut interest rates, which was largely in line with market expectations. On the other hand, the FTSE 100 lost 0.2%, partly linked to sell offs in the AI sector. Across Asia, Hong Kong's Hang Seng lost 0.4%, while Japan's Nikkei 225 added 0.7% w/w, buoyed by gains in the banking and real estate sectors on Friday.

• Fixed Income:

Bond	Current	Previous	w/w change
US 10 Yr Bond	4.18%	4.14%	▲ 4.3bps
UK 10 Yr Gilt	4.53%	4.48%	▲ 4.4bps

Japan 10 Year Bond	1.96%	1.95%	▲ 0.3bps

Source: Investing.com, Bloomberg, AIB AXYS Research

❖ Yields for 10-year bonds rose in most markets despite the Fed delivering a 25 bps cut, in line with market expectations. In the US, the 10-year bond yield rose by 4.2 bps to close the week at 4.18%. The Fed did not issue any hawkish signals, contrary to some investors' positions, indicating that rate hikes are not in their base case. On the short end of the curve, 2-year bond yields fell, closing at 3.529%. Going into 2026, the market expects at least two more rate cuts as the Fed tries to arrive at a neutral rate. In addition, investors' attention now turns to upcoming economic data, including November payrolls as well as CPI data.

❖ Across the Atlantic, the UK 10-year Gilt inched higher by 4.4 bps to end the week at 4.53%. Although yields had touched 4.6% during the week, weaker than expected GDP data pulled yields lower after indications that UK GDP contracted by 0.1%, while the market had priced in a 0.1% expansion for the month of October. Following this contraction, the market has increased prospects for a rate cut by the Bank of England. In Germany, the 10-year Bund closed the week at 2.86%, up by 6.1 bps on a weekly basis. Investor attention will now shift to the upcoming ECB meeting, where rates are expected to be left unchanged.

❖ Across Asia, Japan's 10 year bond yield rose by 0.3 bps to 1.96%, remaining relatively flat for the week as the market continues to warm up to potential rate hikes by the Bank of Japan. This follows growing views that there is a need to tame current inflation levels in the country, which have breached the desired target.

❖ The US dollar depreciated against a basket of currencies last week after the Fed Chair gave no signs of rate hikes, noting that rate hikes are not in their base case. The US dollar index closed the week at 98.393, down from 98.986 the previous week. For the week, the dollar lost the most against the Euro, with the EUR/USD pair closing at 1.174, 83 bps higher, after investors digested the Fed's position, which showed no signs of a hawkish stance, compelling them to sell the dollar.
