Key Highlights

- Spot market treasury bills were oversubscribed, recording a subscription rate of 130.28% from 107.99% recorded the previous week. Demand continued to skew towards the 364-day paper, which attracted KES 17.32Bn in bids against KES 10.00Bn offered, underscoring investor preference for the longer paper. The 182-day paper also recorded healthy uptake, receiving KES 9.61Bn against the KES 10.00Bn on offer, while the 91-day paper saw solid demand with KES 4.34Bn in bids versus KES 4.00Bn offered.
- In the results from the reopened FXDI/2019/020 and FXD1/2022/025, the government registered a performance rate of 119.24% with total bids received amounting to KES 71.54 Bn against a target of KES 60.00 Bn. The total amount of accepted bids was KES 60.58 Bn. The weighted average rate of accepted bids for FXDI/2019/020 and FXD1/2022/025 was 13.2623% (slightly above our competitive bidding range recommendation) and 13.7561% (well in line with our competitive bidding range recommendation), respectively, while the coupon rates for the bonds were 12.8730% and 14.1880%, respectively.
- The 91-day Treasury Bill rate witnessed a 0.09 bps w/w downtick to 7.73%. Meanwhile, the accepted average yields on the 182-day paper stagnated at 7.80%, whilst the 364-day paper declined by 0.50 bps. Looking ahead, we expect yields to continue trending downwards in the near term, however, now at a slower pace.
- Across the secondary bond market, the value of bonds traded increased 83.2% w/w to KES 42.44 Bn from KES 23.16 Bn recorded a week prior. The NSE Bond Index witnessed an increase of 66.70 bps w/w to 1157.65 points, driven largely by a decrease in the 15-year benchmark yields. The 16-year yield rose the most by 23.32 bps w/w while the 15-year yield eased the most by 84.30 bps w/w.
- Yields on Kenya's Eurobond papers increased by an average of 24.3 bps w/w. The table below shows the performance of the Eurobond papers.

Stanbic Bank Kenya Purchasing Managers Index- December 2025

- According to Stanbic Bank Kenya's Purchasing Managers' Index, business conditions in Kenya remained firmly in expansion territory in December, with the headline PMI easing slightly to 53.7 from 55.0 in November. While the moderation signals a slower pace of growth, readings above 50.0 continue to point to solid expansion in private sector activity, supported by resilient demand.
- Business activity, new orders, and purchasing activity continued to expand, driven by robust customer demand. Firms reported a marked increase in sales, prompting higher input purchases and inventory accumulation to support production and ensure timely deliveries.
- Employment growth accelerated sharply, recording its strongest pace since November 2019, as firms scaled up staffing levels to meet rising workloads and sustained demand conditions.
- Inflationary pressures re-accelerated from November's low, with higher input prices linked to increased tax burdens, fuel costs, and raw material prices. Nevertheless, overall input cost inflation remained below its long-run average, while output price increases and wage pressures were relatively contained.
- Supplier delivery times improved significantly, reaching their fastest level since September 2021, reflecting enhanced supply chain efficiency and stronger vendor competition. Business sentiment for 2026 remained positive, underpinned by planned investments, product diversification, and increased advertising. However, improving demand conditions may translate into gradual inflationary pressures in the months ahead.

Liquidity

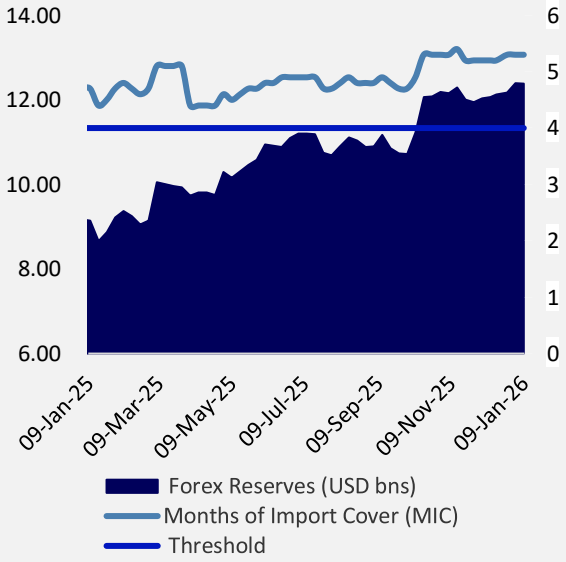

- The Kenya Shilling Overnight Interbank Average (KESONIA) closed the week lower at 8.97%. Going forward, we expect KESONIA to move largely in line with the CBR rate.

AIB-AXYS Weekly Global Markets Note

12th January 2026

• Global Markets Commentary

- America's actions in Venezuela dominated market conversations last week, providing a lift to industrials as the Dow advanced. President Nicolás Maduro was captured and detained in the US and now faces serious drug trafficking charges. Venezuela is endowed with vast oil wealth and holds the largest proven oil reserves globally. Yet prolonged political and economic instability has kept the country a sleeping giant, with production levels remaining subdued due to severe underinvestment in energy infrastructure. Its oil reserves are largely deep-seated, requiring heavy and capital-intensive infrastructure deployment.
- The US now appears determined to restore stability in Venezuela, a move that could rebuild confidence among American firms and unlock infrastructure investment over time. However, this will not be a plug and play base case. The absence of adequate infrastructure and the technical complexity of extracting deep oil reserves mean the benefits will take longer to materialize. Political instability also remains a key overhang, tempering near-term optimism despite the long-term potential.
- Eventually, the December job data were released, showing job additions of 50,000, well below expectations. Unemployment edged down to 4.4%. The Fed will be closely watching labor market conditions as it heads into its upcoming policy meeting, and this report points to a softening jobs environment. Ahead of the December payroll release, markets had priced in at least two rate cuts in 2026. However, the latest data have trimmed expectations for an additional rate cut at the January meeting.

- Global equities opened the first full trading week of 2026 on a broadly positive note, with most major indices closing higher. In the US, the S&P 500 gained 1.6% over the week. Notably, the Dow advanced 2.3% w/w; the market was supported by strength in defensive and energy stocks following President Trump's plans to increase the defence budget, which lifted prices across the aerospace and defence sector. On Friday, President Trump met with senior oil and gas executives from leading US energy companies to discuss opportunities in Venezuela, a country endowed with vast oil reserves that remain untapped after prolonged periods of instability. Oil prices ended the week higher. Across Europe, the German DAX closed 2.9% higher as investors assessed ongoing geopolitical developments while digesting US job data. The FTSE 100 climbed 1.7%. In Asia, the Nikkei 225 added 1.5% over the week, tracking broader market gains, while the Hang Seng slipped 0.4%, bucking the regional trend.

Source: Investing.com, Bloomberg, AIB AXYS Research

- Yields on the US 10-year bond closed 2.0 bps lower at 4.18% as December job data came in mixed. Unemployment eased to 4.4%, while job additions came in below expectations at 50,000. In addition, November data were revised down to 56,000 from 64,000, continuing to point to a weakening labour market. The market now expects the Fed to pause at its next meeting. This week, markets will be paying close attention to the Supreme Court's ruling on President Trump's tariff policies, as well as CPI data, which had been disrupted by the government shutdown.
- Across the Atlantic, the UK 10-year gilt eased 16.1 bps in the first full trading week of 2026. We attribute this to increased market expectations that the Bank of England may maintain a dovish stance, amid growing conviction that inflationary pressures could ease faster than previously anticipated. In addition, the German 10-year bund eased 3.6 bps over the week, tracking broader market movements.
- Japan's 10-year bond yield rose to 2.10% amid increased prospects of a rate hike by the Bank of Japan. Governor Ueda noted that the BoJ would continue with rate hikes if inflation and economic conditions align with its targets.
