AIB-AXYS Weekly Fixed Income Note

26th January 2026

Key Highlights

- Spot market treasury bills were undersubscribed, recording a subscription rate of 76.46% from 128.44% recorded the previous week. Demand remained weak across all tenors. Notably, the 91-day paper recorded the weakest performance at 34.34%, receiving bids worth KES 1.37 Bn against KES 4.00 offered.
- In the results for the bond switch from FXD1/2016/010 to FXD1/2022/015. A total of KES 26.49 Bn was received against the offer amount of KES 20.00 Bn, translating to a performance rate of 132.46%. The apex bank accepted KES 25.17 Bn, of which KES 21.71 Bn (approximately 86.3%) were competitive bids. The destination bond, FXD1/2022/015, has a coupon of 13.9420%, while the market weighted average yield came in at 13.2087%, against the 13.1669% weighted average accepted yield. This market operation strategy will help lengthen the government debt maturity profile.
- The government is looking to raise KES 50.00Bn through the re-opening of the FXD3/2019/015 and FXD1/2018/025 bonds, which are earmarked for budgetary support in FY25/26. The bonds have quoted tenors to maturity of 8.4 yrs and 17.3 yrs, while the coupon rates are set at 12.3400% and 13.4000%, respectively. Bidding is set to close on 11th February 2026. We will be issuing further bidding guidance.
- The 91-day Treasury Bill rate witnessed a 2.63 bps w/w uptick to 7.73%. Meanwhile, the accepted average yields on the 182-day paper declined by 0.66%, whilst the 364-day paper declined by 0.31 bps. Looking ahead, we expect yields to continue trending downwards in the near term; however, now at a slower pace.
- Across the secondary bond market, the value of bonds traded increased 10.4% w/w to KES 83.57 Bn from KES 75.68 Bn recorded a week prior. The NSE Bond Index witnessed an increase of 10.74 bps w/w to 1164.72 points, driven largely by a decrease in the 4-year benchmark yields. The 16-year yield rose the most by 74.37 bps w/w while the 4-year yield eased the most by 64.58 bps w/w.
- Yields on Kenya's Eurobond papers decreased by an average of 7.10 bps w/w. The table below shows the performance of the Eurobond papers.

Macroeconomic Developments

Exchange Rate

- The Kenya Shilling appreciated against the USD, closing the week at KES 129.02 from KES 129.03 the previous week, a marginal w/w appreciation of 0.01%. The Shilling's YTD appreciation against the USD stood at 0.2%.
- Official forex reserves decreased by 2.1% w/w to USD 12,219 Mn from USD 12,477 Mn. The current reserves now offer about 5.3 months of import cover, meeting the CBK's statutory requirement of 4 months. The reserves also met the EAC's convergence requirement of 4.5 months of import cover.

January 2026 Inflation

- Inflation data for December is due this week, and we project headline inflation to fall in the range of 4.4% to 4.6%, largely supported by easing fuel prices in the January - February 2026 pricing cycle.

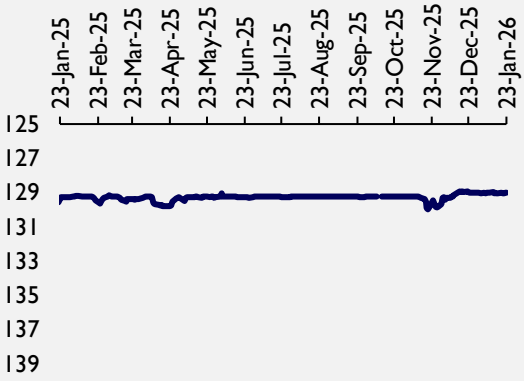

EPRA Pump Price Review- January 2026

- The Energy and Petroleum Regulatory Authority (EPRA) has released the maximum retail pump prices for the January–February 2026 pricing cycle, with prices declining across all fuel categories. Super Petrol, Diesel, and Kerosene prices have decreased by KES 2.00, KES 1.00, and KES 1.00 per litre, respectively. As a result, Super Petrol will now retail at KES 182.52 per litre, Diesel at KES 170.47 per litre, and Kerosene at KES 153.78 per litre in Nairobi.
- The downward adjustment reflects a broad-based decline in international petroleum import costs. EPRA noted that the average landed cost of Super Petrol edged down by 0.10% to USD 592.24 per cubic metre in December 2025. Meanwhile, Diesel and Kerosene recorded sharper declines of 4.20% and 8.92%, with landed costs falling to USD 626.75 and USD 607.55 per cubic metre, respectively. The decline in import costs eased pricing pressures, allowing for lower domestic pump prices despite the prevailing tax structure.
- Looking ahead, we expect fuel prices to remain relatively stable in the near term, supported by easing global oil prices and a stable exchange rate environment. The reduction in pump prices is likely to further ease cost-push inflationary pressures and support inflation remaining within the CBK's target range. However, risks remain, particularly from potential global supply disruptions and heightened geopolitical tensions that could reverse recent gains.

Liquidity

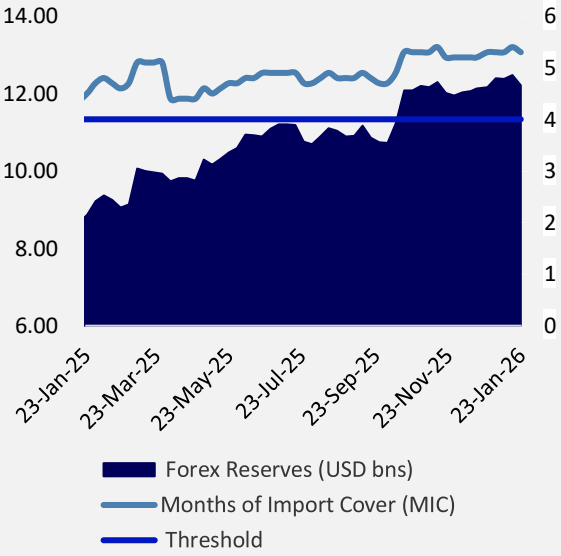

- The Kenya Shilling Overnight Interbank Average (KESONIA) closed the week at 8.98%. Going forward, we expect KESONIA to move largely in line with the CBR rate.

AIB-AXYS Weekly Global Markets Note

26th January 2026

• Global Markets Commentary

- US markets experienced a shortened trading week, closing on Monday in observance of Dr. Martin Luther King Day. Geopolitics once again shaped market direction, with President Trump's tariff threats against key European trading partners over Greenland, including France, Germany, and the UK, weighing on investor sentiment. Most major indices closed the week in the red as renewed tariff proposals triggered sell offs on Wall Street, approaching the magnitude seen during the Liberation Day losses. Although President Trump later softened his stance, the shift was insufficient to restore weekly gains.
- Despite the risk off tone, the US earnings season has so far delivered resilient corporate results and is expected to act as a near term catalyst for equities. A majority of corporates have exceeded consensus estimates, reinforcing confidence in earnings durability. AI related stocks, together with ecosystem enablers, remain firmly on investors' radar, supported by strong structural growth prospects in both the near and long term, particularly if earnings momentum continues to underpin valuations. In China, equities were supported by gains in domestic AI related counters, as the administration continues to signal policy support for local industries despite subdued domestic demand.
- Investor focus shifts to the upcoming Federal Reserve meeting, where markets expect the Fed to hold rates amid a weakening labour market and sticky inflation. Nonetheless, expectations remain anchored around at least two rate cuts by year end. Attention will also turn to the appointment of the new Fed leadership, widely anticipated to adopt a more dovish stance, which could accelerate the easing cycle in line with President Trump's policy preferences.

- Bearish sentiment clipped the market last week, leaving equities nursing weekly losses after tariff threats by President Trump weighed on investor confidence. Although equities rallied after he softened his stance, losses earlier in the week, particularly on Tuesday, were too deep to recover weekly gains. The S&P 500 fell 2.1% on Tuesday, underscoring the heightened sensitivity of equity markets to policy signals. Corporate earnings in the US have continued to come in resiliently, acting as a tailwind for the broader market. Key to note, Intel shares declined on Friday after management highlighted challenges in retaining AI data center chip clients.
- Across Europe, the DAX and FTSE 100 declined by 1.6% and 0.9% week on week, tracking broader global market weakness and weighed down by renewed tariff threats from President Trump. However, the DAX found some support on Friday, driven by gains in key industrial counters. In Asia, the Hang Seng and Nikkei posted losses of 0.4% and 0.2%, respectively. That said, the Nikkei gained 0.3% on Friday after the Bank of Japan left rates unchanged, a move that was widely expected by the market.

• Fixed Income:

Source: Investing.com, Bloomberg, AIB AXYS Research

- In the US, the 10 year Treasury yield surged by 0.3 bps to settle at 4.23%, after President Trump threatened tariffs on European countries that questioned his plans on Greenland. Key to note, the 10 year benchmark briefly touched 4.3% as investors continued to assess the US fiscal position. Should investors increasingly identify risk around the US fiscal outlook, this could compel investors, especially those outside America, to sell off their holdings in US debt, which may continue to push yields higher.
- In Europe, the UK 10 year gilt yield rose by 13.2 bps on a weekly basis to 4.53%, as prospects for a rate cut dwindled following stronger than expected economic data. Germany's 10-year Bund yield rose by 6.9 bps to 4.53%, supported by PMI data that came in above expectations.
- In Japan, the 10 year benchmark yield rose by 8.0 bps to 2.26%, following reports that Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi will embark on fiscal spending, prompting investors to reassess the country's fiscal outlook. This was further compounded by proposals to cut sales tax on food. In addition, Takaichi announced plans to dissolve Parliament and call for snap elections, a move that could help advance her fiscal agenda.

Source: Investing.com AIB AXYS Research

- The US dollar posted its worst weekly losses since May, weighed down by President Trump's tariffs on key European countries. The US dollar index lost ground against major currencies, shedding 199 bps to close the week at 97.40, from 99.38 in the previous week. The yen appreciated by 147 bps after sustained weeks of losses, with the USD/JPY pair ending the week at 155.720.
