AIB-AXYS Weekly Fixed Income Note

23rd March 2026

Key Highlights

- Spot market Treasury bills were oversubscribed, recording a subscription rate of 146.9%, moderating from 182.3% recorded the previous week. Demand was skewed towards the 91-day paper, which received bids worth KES 14.45Bn against KES 4.00Bn offered, pointing to a strong investor preference for near-term liquidity. The 182-day and 364-day papers recorded relatively balanced uptake, attracting KES 10.30Bn and KES 10.51Bn in bids against KES 10.00Bn offered, respectively, indicating a more even distribution of demand across the mid- and long-tenor segments.
- The 91-day Treasury Bill rate registered a 0.43 bps w/w uptick to 7.57%. Meanwhile, the accepted average yields on the 182-day paper dropped by 0.58 bps, whilst the 364-day paper eased by 13.60 bps to 8.34%.
- In the results from the reopened FXD1/2019/020 and FXD1/2021/025, the government registered a performance rate of 195.72% with total bids received amounting to KES 117.43 Bn against a target of KES 60.00 Bn. The total amount of accepted bids was KES 60.99 Bn. The weighted average rate of accepted bids for FXD1/2019/020 and FXD1/2021/025 was 12.7475% and 12.9489%, respectively (slightly below our competitive bidding range recommendation), while the coupon rates for the bonds were 12.8730% and 13.9240%, respectively.
- The government conducted a bond switch auction for FXD3/2019/015, recording an oversubscription of 148.1%, with total bids received amounting to KES 22.21Bn against a target of KES 15.00Bn, while KES 18.40Bn was accepted. The weighted average rate of accepted bids came in at 11.5887%, against a coupon rate of 12.3400%, indicating strong investor participation. The switch from FXD1/2021/005 to FXD3/2019/015, which has a remaining tenor of 8.3 years, supports the government's strategy to lengthen its debt maturity profile and ease near-term refinancing pressures.
- Across the secondary bond market, the value of bonds traded increased 2.7% w/w to KES 83.12 Bn from KES 80.95 Bn recorded a week prior. The NSE Bond Index witnessed an increase of 83.22 bps w/w to 1,201.95 points, driven largely by a decrease in the 9-year benchmark yields. The 13-year yield rose the most by 28.54 bps w/w, while the 9-year yield eased the most by 56.95 bps w/w.
- Yields on Kenya's Eurobond papers increased by an average of 9.39 bps w/w, partly pressured by the ongoing conflict in the Middle East. The table below shows the performance of the Eurobond papers.

Macroeconomic Developments

Exchange Rate

- The Kenya Shilling depreciated against the USD, closing the week at KES 129.52 from KES 129.30 the previous week, a marginal w/w depreciation of 0.2%. The Shilling's YTD depreciation against the USD stood at 0.4%.
- Official forex reserves decreased by 1.2% w/w to USD 14,294 Mn from USD 14,461 Mn. The current reserves now offer about 6.1 months of import cover, meeting the CBK's statutory requirement of 4 months. The reserves also met the EAC's convergence requirement of 4.5 months of import cover.

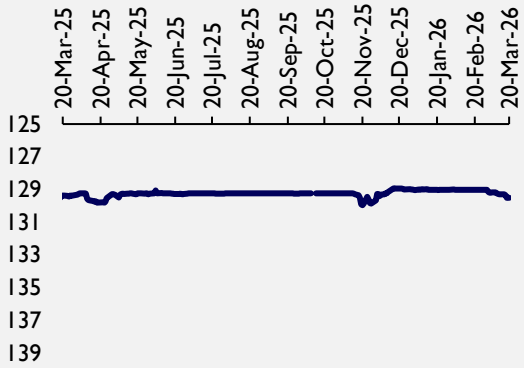

Liquidity

- The Kenya Shilling Overnight Interbank Average (KESONIA) closed the week at 8.68%. Going forward, we expect KESONIA to move largely in line with the CBR rate.

EPRA Pump Price Review – March 2026

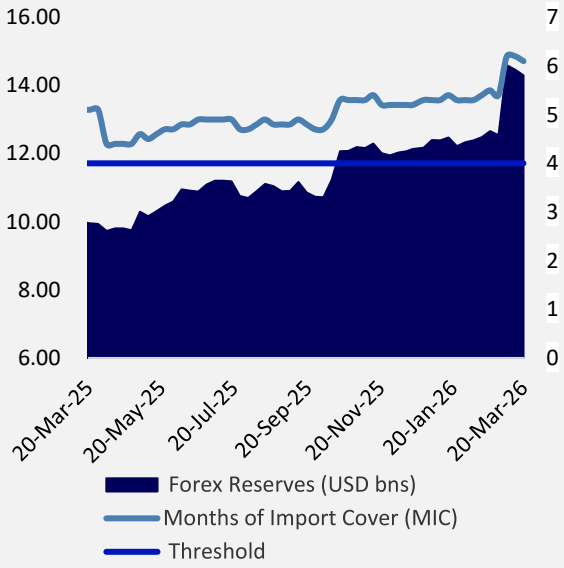

- The Energy & Petroleum Regulatory Authority (EPRA) has released the maximum retail pump prices for the period 15th March 2026 to 14th April 2026, maintaining prices at the same level recorded in the previous review cycle.
- In Nairobi, Super Petrol, Diesel and Kerosene will continue to retail at KES 178.28, KES 166.54 and KES 152.78 per litre, respectively.
- Despite the stability in retail prices, average landed costs increased during the review period. Super Petrol rose by 1.00% to USD 582.11 per cubic metre from USD 576.34 in January 2026. Diesel increased by 8.46% to USD 636.45 per cubic metre from USD 586.80. Kerosene rose by 6.79% to USD 639.48 per cubic metre from USD 598.82.
- EPRA noted that the pricing calculations were based on petroleum cargoes received and discharged between 10th February and 9th March 2026, with most cargoes reflecting February international pricing benchmarks.
- The regulator also indicated that recent geopolitical developments in the Middle East have not yet been reflected in the current pricing cycle, as the cargoes considered were priced earlier.
- Going forward, pump prices are expected to remain relatively stable in the near term, supported by currency stability. However, upward pressure may emerge should global oil prices rise further amid geopolitical tensions and supply disruptions.

AIB-AXYS Weekly Global Markets Note

• Global Markets Commentary

- Major global central banks took center stage this past week, reconvening to recalibrate the monetary policy path against a rapidly shifting backdrop, where the investment landscape has been upended, and inflation fears have re-emerged, fueled by escalating tensions in the Middle East. The Federal Reserve left interest rates unchanged during last week's meeting, leaving the benchmark rate at 3.50%-3.75%. Fed Chair Jerome Powell noted that the Middle East conflict will keep oil prices elevated, posing a risk to inflation, which was already stubbornly sticky before the conflict. Inflation concerns have continued to trim bets for rate cuts in the US. Now, the market expects at least one rate cut this year, down from two at the beginning of the year.
- Across Europe, the Bank of England (BoE) left rates unchanged at 3.75%, a widely expected move. The Central Bank expects inflation to rise to around 3.0%-3.5% due to high energy prices. At the same time, the European Central Bank (ECB) also held the rate steady. Additionally, during the week, reports indicated that inflation climbed to 1.9% in February from 1.7% in January, still below 2.0% target; however, this has reignited potential rate hike prospects.
- Crossing over to Asia, the Bank of Japan (BoJ), as expected, left the interest rate at 0.75%, and flagged inflationary pressure as a result of higher fuel prices. It is worth mentioning that Japan is a net importer of oil, which implies it might face adverse effects if there is no de-escalation in the Middle East.

- The equities market was weighed down by the conflict in the Middle East. The conflict in the Middle East will extend into week four, following Friday's remarks by President Trump that he does not want a ceasefire, trimming possibilities for de-escalation and sending the equity market lower, as the US plans to send boots on the ground. On Friday, the S&P 500 slipped 1.5%, while the Nasdaq tech-heavy index lost 1.8%. There is growing concern that the conflict might take longer than expected. This is now being priced into oil futures; this might ripple through inflation, dragging growth. Interestingly, save for last week, US equities have been outperforming peers since the onset of the war, marking a turnaround, where the US was trailing other global market peers before the start of the conflict in the Middle East, weighed down by sell-offs in the tech sector as concerns regarding valuation and capex heightened. The recent outperformance of US equities after the conflict can be partly linked to the fact that the US is likely to face fewer shocks from oil market disruption since it is a net oil exporter, while Europe and Asia are largely net importers.
- Turning focus to Europe, the equities market was reading from the same script; the FTSE 100 recorded a 3.3% w/w decline, dragged by rising oil prices and a hawkish tone from the Bank of England. Over in Germany, the DAX lost 0.6% on a weekly basis. In Asia, the Nikkei and Hang Seng lost 0.8% and 0.7%, respectively.

• Fixed Income:

Bond	Current	Previous	w/w change
US 10 Yr Bond	4.39%	4.28%	▲ 10.5bps
UK 10 Yr Gilt	4.94%	4.77%	▲ 16.9bps

- Investors continue to assess the Middle East conflict and its impact on real yields, while keeping in mind that higher inflation might continue to gnaw at real returns. This has lowered bond prices and consequently sent yields higher across the board. In the US, the 10-year bond yield rose by 10.5 bps to settle at 4.39% on Friday. While the Fed kept rates unchanged, the market expects one cut during the year, a departure from the earlier position at the beginning of the year, when the market was betting on at least two rate cuts; the knock-on effect of higher inflation has reduced prospects for more cuts.
- Crossing over to Europe, the UK's 10-year bond yield rose to 4.94% (having briefly touched 5.0%, one of the highest levels since April 2008), a 16.9 bps w/w increase from 4.77% recorded the previous week. The movement can be linked to the hawkish tone from the Bank of England following anticipation of higher inflationary pressures, as investors started to factor in the possibility of rate hikes in the coming meetings. Additionally, Germany's 10-year Bund climbed by 6.7 bps to settle at 3.05% (crossing 3.0% for the first time since July 2011), as the market continues to digest the ECB's position, which is largely interpreted as hawkish owing to the ongoing conflict in the Middle East.
- Over to Asia, Japan's 10-year bond yield rose by 2.3 bps to 2.27%, as the Bank of Japan left interest rates unchanged as expected. However, the BoJ noted that it will be paying closer attention to inflation and growth; if these metrics fall short of expectations, the BoJ will be compelled to implement hikes.
