AXYS July 2026 Primary Bond Auction Note II

Summary

- The Exchequer is seeking to raise KES 40.00Bn through the re-opening of the FXD1/2019/20 and FXD1/2022/025 treasury bonds earmarked for budgetary support in FY26/27.
- Authorities returns to the market with a second bond auction in July. Liquidity levels were evident at the previous auction, where the fiscal agent accepted fewer than half of the total bids submitted, signaling a clear intent to stick to the borrowing target rather than absorb excess demand at unfavourable rates. This selective acceptance also suggests authorities are keen to keep yields anchored lower, consistent with the government's broader strategy of leaning on the domestic market to plug the fiscal deficit. Investors, on the other hand, continue to grapple with elevated inflation, which is likely to keep bidding aggressive as they seek to protect real returns.
- We expect demand in this auction to be skewed towards the FXD1/2022/025, given its comparatively higher coupon of 14.1880%. With this auction targeting a smaller amount than the previous one, the government is well positioned to reject aggressive bids and maintain its preference for lower yields.
- Our recommended competitive bidding yield is indicated in Table 1 on the right.

Yield Curve

Yields have continued their upward climb across the curve, driven largely by expectations of rising inflation and lingering uncertainty around the direction of the monetary policy rate. This has pushed investors to demand higher compensation to safeguard their real returns. The pattern we flagged earlier in the spot market remains firmly in place, with strong appetite persisting for the 91-day paper. This behaviour points to a market that is bracing for higher yields near term, with investors favouring shorter-dated instruments to preserve the flexibility to reinvest into longer tenors should returns improve further out.

That said, while not our central expectation, we see scope for this upward yield trend to ease somewhat over the coming months, supported by the emergence of a workable Middle East framework that has helped calm inflation fears as energy prices soften following the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz. Even so, we remain mindful that the ceasefire underpinning this improvement is far from secure.

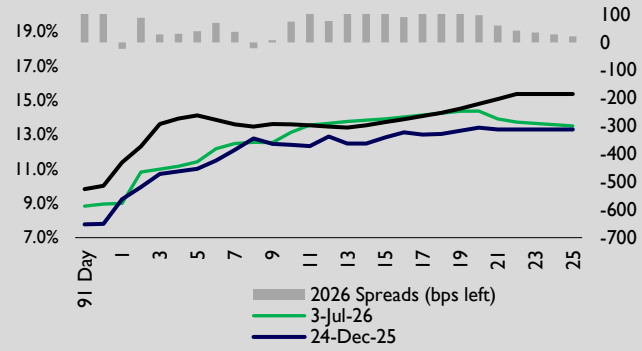

Market Liquidity

The Kenya Shilling Overnight Interbank Average (KESONIA) remained relatively stable at 8.75%, largely unchanged from May's level. Additionally, interbank volumes decreased by approximately 17.7% m/m.

Price Levels

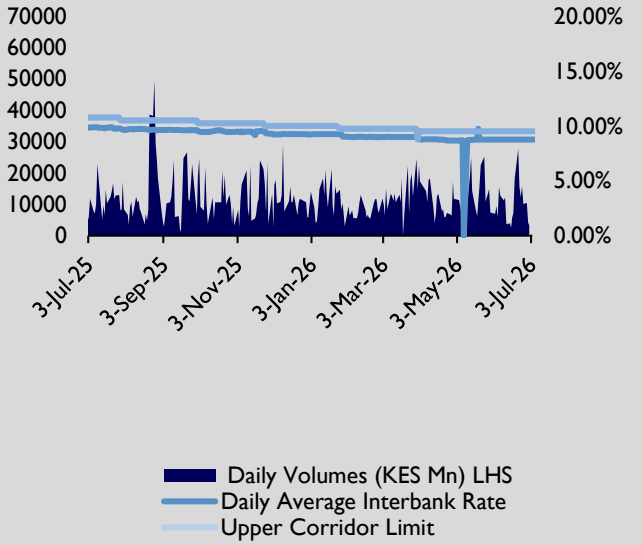

Headline inflation eased to 6.4% in June 2026 from 6.7% in May, broadly in line with our projected range. Food inflation remained the largest contributor to headline inflation, with the Food and Non-Alcoholic Beverages index rising 8.6% y/y, while Transport inflation remained elevated at 16.1% despite lower pump prices during the month. Underlying inflation showed early signs of easing. Core inflation moderated slightly to 3.1% from 3.2% in May, while non-core inflation declined to 15.1% from 16.0%, suggesting that supply-side pressures, particularly from food and energy, began to ease even as inflation remained above historical levels. Looking ahead, we expect inflation to gradually ease in the near term on the back of improving global oil supply following the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz. We expect lower oil prices in this month's fuel cycle by EPRA, which will, in turn, support the easing of non-core inflation.
